

J R McKenzie Trust: Peter McKenzie Project

Easy Read – Call for Ideas

What is this about?

The J R McKenzie Trust:

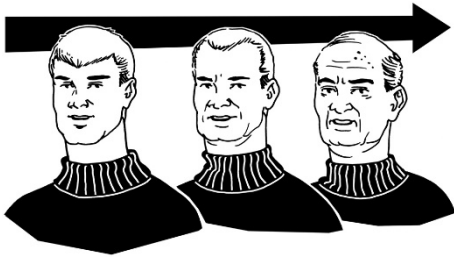

- is a charitable trust
- gives money to people and groups who are working to make sure that all New Zealanders have the same chance to do well.

The J R McKenzie Trust has some money to give to people with ideas about helping families / whānau who are poor.

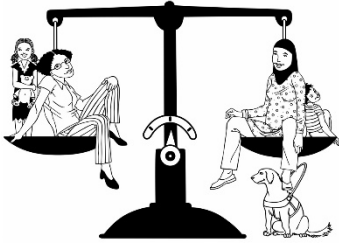

When the Trust gives out money this is called a grant.

The Trust is looking for ideas that could help people and families / whānau for a long time.

The J R McKenzie Trust wants to know:

- what can be done so all children / tamariki have the same chances as others to do well?

- what can we change so that families / whānau live well?

- what parts of the way things work in New Zealand make it hard for some people to have the money they need to live a good life?

- how can we fix the way things work in New Zealand so this does not happen?

The J R McKenzie Trust
wants your ideas for projects that will help young people and their families / whānau in the future.

Project ideas could be about changing:

- how much money families / whānau get each week
- how much money people need to pay in tax
- how people can save money
- chances to get and keep jobs.

This grant is important because:

- we want project ideas that will make a big change to the lives of poor people

- our project will run for up to 20 years

- we can find people who can help you with your idea

- we want to help people to share ideas and work together.

Tell us your project ideas!

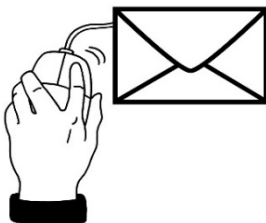

- Fill out the form on our website:
